Council of Constance Deals Papal Schism Martin V is elected pope as the Conciliar movement fails to win reforms

For 30 yrs, from ~1378 there were two popes Urban VI in Rome and Clement VII in Avignon were the beginning popes. The emerging nation-states of Europe allied themselves with one or the other for reasons of secular rivalry.
The scandal gave rise to the Councils movements, with information, especially the French, seeking to divide the papacy from its entanglement by making pope subject to the decision of general councils of the church. The action was ended at the council of Constance, which lasted from 1414 to 1418 and in 1415 elected

Innocent V as pope. Once he was elected, the reform movement lost impetus & within a few yrs. it was made history to appear from the page & a general council. The Schism had greatly raised the prominence of the national churches, and the papacy became a more merely Italian office

COUNCIL of CONSTANCE

Some of the sessions were reckoned as the 16th ecumenical council. It was summoned to end the church schism, in which 3 men were claiming to be POPE.

GREGORY XII (since recognized as canonical pope), John XXIII (COSSA, BALDASSARRE), and Benedict XIII (LUNA, Pedro De). Reform of Christian life, & extirpation of heresy, were also aims of the Convocation which was arrived by train at the residence of enjoying 519 15 MUND. Government chose the place - conference, an imperial city. During the council, enormous crowds visited the city & there was much pagantry. 1st train was April 14. The 45th & last train was in April 22, 1418. It was dominated by theologians, especially French, who held the council theory that had appeared at the Council of Pisa, instead of traditional assembly of Bishops, the council was regarded as a convention of nations (German, Italian, French, and English; Spanish later as having one vote
